INDIAN EXPEDITIONS.

PRESCOTT, June, 15th 1867.

EDITOR ARIZONA MINER.—I read in the Alta California, of the 11th of April, a brief account of the Rio Verde expedition against the Indians. As no details were given I think a more graphic description may prove interesting to your readers, and at the same time have a beneficial effect on the mining and agricultural interests of the Territory; at least, it is a foregone conclusion in my mind, that the subjugation of the Indians must be accomplished before the attention of capitalists or practical quartz workers will be attracted in a manner tending to develop the vast mineral wealth of the districts at present infested by these infernal red skins.

So much by way of preface, and now to my subject. I shall not trouble your readers with dates; suffice it to say, that the troops under command of Captain J. M. Williams, have been in the field about two or three months, and will probably remain until the rainy season commences. The first and most successful attack up to date, was made on a band of Indians numbering in all, about seventy, who inhabited the slope of what is known as the Black Mountains, about forty
